

PRESS RELEASE - New Immuno Symptom Alert launched in coordination with National Health Awareness programs.

Immuno Laboratories, Inc.

Better Health USA, a division of Immuno Laboratories, Inc., recently launched a monthly service providing health related information to several thousand of its clients. This Alert includes content such as breakthrough scientific research, brief summaries of professional articles, and excerpts from over a quarter million success stories.

A monthly Symptom Alert in coordination with National Health Awareness programs is delivered to consumers and physicians via the Internet, fax and/or email. The entire Alert is focused on providing individuals information and tools to assist in their search for wellness and solutions to their chronic symptoms. Subscribing members receive additional benefits such as access to audio and video resources, professional research literature and symptom library tools allowing access to physician and nutrition experts through the Internet.

Better Health USA clients have immediate access to multiple testing options, including Immuno Laboratories' Immuno One Bloodprint(TM) test. A 25 year ongoing study revealed that 95% of the population has what is known as a "type two" toxic reaction (IgG response) to common everyday foods that are eaten regularly. The study results are further defined and documented in the book "Toxic Food Syndrome" written by Jeffrey Zavik, Better Health USA CEO and founder, and Jim Thompson. Additional content covering specific health issues such as weight loss, diet, sinus infections, ADHD, irritable bowel syndrome, urticaria, fibromyalgia and migraine headaches as related to food sensitivities are available to members on a monthly basis.

Better Health USA's health content service, known as the Immuno Symptom Alert, is targeted towards chronic symptoms and chronic disease. This month's focus is coordinated with Food Allergy Awareness Week, May 11-17. Last month's focus was on Autism, in support of April's National Autism Awareness Month.
